The team checked the source files before preparing the data. Each record received a stable identifier. Missing values and duplicate records were counted separately, and only the training split was used to fit numeric transformations.